Aligning Goals and Strengths Within any Organization to Achieve Maximum Success

Facilitated by Cory Kahabka, Absotively

Experienced in working with companies in mergers & acquisitions, Cory will lead us through the process of defining, measuring, and managing an organizational culture (specifically goals and values) and assessing the strengths of the individuals within the organization. Employing culture based integration relates these areas and aligns the two, maximizing individual and organizational success.

About the Presenter:

Cory has a background in Industrial/Organizational psychology. While working in the Pharmaceutical industry, he wrote his own job description and became National Account Manager- Sports Health. His enviable job was to sell and maintain relationships with people and organizations in the NCAA, NFL, MLB, AFL and NHL. He was able to travel to many great stadiums and ballparks across the country and created a number of great relationships in the sporting community.

Cory is the co-founder of Absotively, a company that uses a comprehensive collection of business tools and systems, to enable employees within every business culture to embrace the skills and conversations that are necessary for their success.
